THE ROAD TO A SOUND FINANCIAL FUTURE BEGINS AT THE 2012 SEATTLE WEDDING SHOW
JAN. 7 AND 8

The 22nd annual show helps save brides and grooms time and money by presenting more than 400 vendors under one roof.

SEATTLE -- Dec. 1, 2011 -- Fortunately, there is an affordable way for the newly betrothed to plan their celebration. Brides and grooms can save time and money by meeting all of their wedding vendors in two days, at one location, for the price of just one admission, at the Seattle Wedding Show.

Family-owned and locally operated since 1989, the Seattle Wedding Show has won Seattle Bride magazine's award for Best Wedding Show ten years in a row. On Jan. 7 and 8, brides, grooms, moms, dads, bridesmaids and groomsmen from all over the Northwest will converge on at the Washington State Convention & Trade Center to peruse flowers and favors; order invitations; sample cakes; and meet ministers and musicians.

Ticket sales begin at 9:30 a.m. Saturday, and doors open at 10 a.m. On Sunday, ticket sales begin at 10 a.m., and doors open at 10:30 a.m. Visitors who attend Saturday will receive a hand stamp that lets them back into the show at no charge on Sunday.

In addition to watching wedding gowns, tuxedos, bridesmaid dresses, mother-of-the-bride dresses and floral bouquets on the runway at fashion shows both days, brides will have the opportunity to save big on more than a thousand wedding gowns at the show's annual gown sale.

Tickets are $17 and can be ordered online at www.weddingshow.com or purchased at the door. Children under 12 are free.

Seattle Wedding Show is proud to donate a portion of each ticket to Gilda's Club Seattle, a nonprofit support community for people with cancer and their family and friends.
